

THE FEW. THE TALENTED. THE INTERNS.

SOLIDLINE INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

*I*nternships are the best way to get started in the film and video field, and SolidLine Media's internship program is a hands on experience that will get you ready to jump start your career. At SolidLine Media you won't be answering phones and getting coffee; you will be a member of our team working on location, learning how a high end production company works, working with clients, and traveling around the world to get the job done right.

SolidLine Media creates high end promotional, corporate, and training videos that have won countless awards. We've shot on three different continents (not to mention almost every state in the US), and have been expanding steadily over the last decade. With high profile clients like John Deere and DHL, SolidLine Media has become an international production company based right in the heart of Chicago.

With the SolidLine Media internship program you could be flying to New York to do an interview one week, driving out to Denver on the SolidLine truck (more like an apartment on wheels) to get B-roll the next, and helping edit it all together after that. On set you will be a full participant helping set up lights, creating shots, and making perfect images to match the clients content. When in the office you can learn how to edit in our Avid editing suites, watch motion graphics and 3D animation development in our Art Department, and just get a big picture understanding of how the projects move from an idea on paper to a full video being seen by the world.

With all of these opportunities there does come responsibility. SolidLine runs three four month internship programs a year and if you are hired you are expected to be a full time member. Whether you enrolled for college credit or not, the team is going to be counting on you to be available for shoots, travel, and participation in the full film making process. SolidLine will make sure you walk away from the intern program with the knowledge and experience to make you stand out from the crowd.

The SolidLine Intern program runs seasonally,
